Phillips spoke of his interest in the Phillips spoke of his interest in the Sheitering Arms from reading the accounts in the newspaper of the services held there, and of his being glad to be with them. He took for his subject St. Paul's words in the tempestuous storm on the Mediterranean For there stood by me this night the Angel of God whose I am and whom I serve. Some of the thoughts clearly brought out were: With Paul's night of danger there came a way of escape, for the angel of God had told him what to do. Because of the presence of St. Paul all were saved, saved to help and serve others, saved for the furtherance of the Gospel of Christ.

TRIBUTE TO A FRIEND. A. H. Writes of the Late John W

Kelly. J. A. H. writes The Bulletin the following tribute to his old friend John W. Kelly, who was recently killed near Middletown:

I have known Jack Kelly for a num-ber of years. He was a kind son, a ber of years. He was a kind son, a loyal friend, was as brave as a lion, and no doubt his bravery caused his untimely end. Had he jumped when his car struck the stone coping at the bridge he no doubt would have saved his life, but he clung to the wheel trying to right his car. Many a Norwich boy was put to work in the Hartford Rubber works through the influence of dear old Jack. Many a Norwich boy when stranded and out of funds in Hartford always knew who to call on and never went away hunto call on and never went away hun-gry or empty handed. He had a heart as big as a mountain, was always good natured and tried to make everybody. happy. In all the years I knew him I never saw him lose his temper. At the Falls he was worshipped by every man, woman and child and in Hart-ford he made a host of friends, who will never forget him. May the Lord
